HOOVER WANTS ACTION IN DRY ENFORCEMENT

President Considers Conditions Deplorable—Dry Head Optimistic.

WASHINGTON, June 7.—President Hoover wants action in prohibition enforcement—real action. Impatient because of existing conditions, and unwilling to wait two years while his civilian law-enforcement commission leisurely studies the abstract question of what makes the American people lawless, Mr. Hoover has called upon congress to get busy, and ordered the prohibition bureau to tighten up everywhere.

"As a result, congress had before it today a request from the White House to appoint a select committee to work during the summer so that legislative wrenches may be applied to the enforcement machinery when congress meets again in the fall, and the treasury is engaged in another of its spectacular efforts to mop up the wringing wet Detroit sector."

DEMANDS ACTION
Meanwhile, the law observance committee headed by ex-Attorney-General Wickersham continued its sessions in a downtown office-building, examining cabinet members and other government officials behind closed doors.

In his request to congress to appoint a select committee to study legislative needs during the recess with a similar committee from the government departments, Mr. Hoover plainly indicated he considered existing conditions to be deplorable. He said he wanted to secure "the utmost expedition in the reorganization of enforcement activities, and hoped to improve effectiveness of existing laws."

The principal change contemplated, although it was not mentioned specifically, is the transfer of prohibition enforcement from the treasury to the department of justice. That involves, too, the transfer of some of the functioning of the auxiliary arms of enforcement, customs, coast guard, etc. It is an intricate business, and there will be considerable fire-works over it before it is ever done. Even the professional drys are split upon whether it is advisable.

DETROIT IN LIMELIGHT
The treasury is throwing all its reserves into the Detroit sector, where liquor comes across from Canada in a never-ending stream. Boats and men are being withdrawn from other sections of the country for duty around Detroit, and the personnel has been shaken up again in hopes of obtaining some results.

The White House may think things are in a pretty bad way, but not so Dr. James M. Doran, chief of the prohibition bureau.

Dr. Doran was almost optimistic today. He characterized enforcement as "moving full speed ahead," and pointed to the arrest of 51,308 persons from July 1 to April 1—more than ever have been arrested before during a similar period.

5 MINERS KILLED

WISE, VA., June 7.—Five miners were crushed to death Thursday in a fall of slate in the Falcon mines near here. Those killed were Fred Hylton, Robert Hall, Coddie Gibson, Allen Stidham and Carroll Miller, all of Wise-co.

Novel Basis for Domestic Suit

Violation of a unique agreement whereby Mrs. Bainbridge Colby, right, estranged wife of the Secretary of State under President Wilson, promised never to ridicule her husband, is the cause for a suit by Mr. Colby, left, to break the agreement. By its terms Mrs. Colby was to get $1,500 a month as long as she did not poke fun at her internationally-known hubby, who says that her novel, "The Green Forest," violates the agreement. His application for divorce following the publication of the book, was denied in a Paris court.

Rocking Chair Now Becoming Museum Piece

CHICAGO, June 7.—The rocking chair, symbol of Victorian America, is teetering toward oblivion. Like the dinosaur, it can't adapt itself to changing conditions.

Ross Crane, home decorating authority and director of a furniture exposition here, predicted today that the rocker soon will be found only in museums.

"It won't team up with other artifacts of furniture," he said.

"It's wandering primitives, together apt it's objectionable spearhead points—always turning up in the wrong place—have written it's doom."

HOOVER MAY GAIN VICTORY

President Now Has Chance To Win in Opposing National Origins Act.

WASHINGTON, June 7.—Assured of a victory in the farm relief battle, President Hoover today appeared to be gaining ground in the senate on his recommendation for repeal of the national origins immigration law.

While the president frequently has declared he would not interfere with the legislative freedom of congress, his emissaries have been waging vigorous campaigns in the senate for elimination of the debenture plan from the farm bill and for repeal of the new immigration quotas, which go into effect July 1. The debenture fight has been won through the activity of administration leaders though the vote may not come until next week.

A different group, lead by Senators Nye (R) of North Dakota, an insurgent, and Allen (R) of Kansas, a newcomer, has conducted the fight to carry out his immigration policy. They have met with extraordinary success so much so that a forlorn hope has been turned into a doubtful contest in which neither side may win. The advocates of the national origins plan, however, may defeat the president's wishes by filibustering.

VATICAN AND ITALY SETTLE OLD DISPUTE

Mussolini and Cardinal Gasparri End 59-Year-Old Estrangement.

ROME, June 7.—The 59-year estrangement between the Roman Catholic church and the Italian government formally came to an end today when Premier Benito Mussolini and Cardinal Gasparri, papal secretary of state, exchanged ratifications of the Lateran treaties providing for complete rapprochement between the Vatican and the state.

The head of the Italian government and the official representative of Pope Pius XI met in the "congregational hall" of Cardinal Gasparri's private apartment in the Vatican. It was the first time that Premier Mussolini, and the first time in almost 60 years that any Italian government official, had set foot inside the walls of the Vatican palace.

MOTORS TO VATICAN
Premier Mussolini, escorted by his aide-de-camps, motored to Vatican Hill from the Chigi palace shortly before 11 o'clock this morning. In historic St. Damasus courtyard of the palace Mussolini was greeted by high Vatican dignitaries, and escorted to the first floor of Cardinal Gasparri's apartment and was taken into the presence of the papal secretary of state.

First Cardinal Gasparri read the papal credentials aloud, in which for the first time since the break between church and state in 1870 a pope alluded to the king of Italy as "our beloved son." Following this reading, the treaty concordat, the financial convention between Vatican and state, and the formal ratifications of the lateran accords were exchanged.

CONFERENCE HELD
Following the formal exchange of ratifications, a protocol outlining settlement of the principal differences between the church and the government was drawn up, and in the presence of witnesses signed by Cardinal Gasparri and Premier Mussolini.

Premier Mussolini and the cardinal then retired for a brief conference the nature of which was not revealed, and both then consented to pose for photographs on the first loggia of the palace near the cardinal's apartment. No motion pictures were allowed, however.

Coincident with the signing of the pacts, the bronze door of the Vatican palace, which had been kept half closed since 1870, was flung wide open, signifying the resumption of relations. At the same time, the Vatican post office was opened for the sale of papal stamps, signifying recognition of the Vatican territory as a separate state, henceforth to be known as Vatican City.

Mr. and Mrs. John Carle will leave Saturday afternoon by Will Washburn, on a motor trip to Detroit, Canada and on to Chicago which is Mr. Washburn's home.

Lindy Sails Summer Seas on Honeymoon

This is the boat in which Col. Charles Lindbergh and his bride, the former Anne Morrow, have been enjoying their honeymoon uninterrupted by newspapermen. The famous aviator and his bride put out to sea again Friday from Cape Porpoise, Maine, where they stopped to get gasoline and to assure reporters that they are having a "dandy trip."

SOCIETY RUM RING EXPOSED

French Count Arrested and Fine Liquors Seized In New York Raid.

NEW YORK, June 7.—Spurred on by achievement of what they consider one of the greatest "dry" scoops in years, federal prohibition agents continued their investigation today into an alleged society liquor ring, in connection with which 33 men, including Count Maxence de Polignac, member of an ancient and aristocratic French line, have already been arrested.

In the belief that the ring had ramifications all over the country, the authorities are confident that more arrests will be made before many hours have passed, and they are on the trail of additional caches of liquor alleged to be owned by the band.

Whiskies and fine wines to the value of $150,000 have already been seized in a series of swooping raids on various places in this city.

Count De Polignac and the other defendants, it was intimated today, may face the severest statute of prohibition enforcement—the Jones law, which provides a maximum sentence of five years in prison and a fine of $10,000.

De Polignac is free under bail of $25,000 and his co-defendants under amounts ranging from $1,500 to $7,500 each. The ring, according to the allegations of prohibition men, is said to have carried on a bootlegging business involving many millions of dollars, most of its clientele being recruited from among society folks of New York and other big cities throughout the country.

'DANDY TRIP', LINDY TRILLS

Happy Aviator and Bride Definitely Located When Cruiser Docks In Maine.

YORK HARBOR, Me., June 7.—Continuing their yachting honeymoon, Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh and his bride shortly after 3 a. m. today left Cape Porpoise in their 35-foot motor cruiser Mouette and headed east.

The "honeymoon yacht" anchored for the night, approximately a quarter of a mile off Cape Porpoise, which is 10 miles from York Harbor between Kennebunkport and Biddeford Pool.

Lindbergh was seen from the Goat Island light today hauling to the anchor of the Mouette. Natives of Cape Porpoise who had put out in a small boat, saw Anne in the door of the cabin. The Mouette was headed toward the Morrow summer home at North Haven, 85 miles up the Maine coast.

Lindbergh told Hartley Phillips, owner of the dock here, that he was having "a dandy trip" adding "we are going to cruise east from here."

They have been loafing along Long Island Sound and the New England coast keeping just one jump ahead of newspapermen.

"Lindy" has nothing to do but sit and eat and an undisturbed supper is aboard the Mouette according to Captain Jim Anderson, the keeper of Goat Island light, who was the first person to sight the craft as it entered the inlet.

House Is Robbed While Officers Chase Convicts

Whether the hard pressed convicts were abroad in the streets of Circleville on Thursday morning, or whether other thieves were at work, has not been decided, but Mrs. Kenneth List of Folsom-ave was the victim of a robbery before noon, in which the thief stole $7 from her purse at her home while she was at work at the Crist department store.

Her sister, Mildred Noble, of near Williamsport, who is visiting at the home, had been in front of the house talking to another sister in an auto, and when she again entered the house some one was heard to go out the back door. At noon when Mrs. List came home for lunch, she found her purse open with the contents gone. A vanity case and a bracelet were later found in the back yard, where they had been evidently discarded by the thief.

CAPTAIN BOGGS GIVEN TRIBUTE

Pioneer, Honored At Logan Elm, Receives Memorial In West Virginia.

High tribute was paid to the memory of Captain John Boggs on Memorial Day at Boggs Run in West Virginia, where a bronze tablet was unveiled at the school house in his memory. This John Boggs is the original John Boggs and the same to whom a stone was erected some years ago at Logan Elm south of Circleville.

This John Boggs is one of the earliest settlers in America, and was the pioneer settler of Boggs Run. Since his time there have been seven other boys by that name, with each generation. John Boggs, the eighth, is the small son of Mr. and Mrs. John Boggs of W. Union-st.

The tablet at Boggs Run was presented to the Wheeling chapter. Daughters of the American Revolution, by his great-granddaughter, Mrs. Mary L. McMechen Stokes, formerly of Wheeling and now of Baltimore, Md. The tablet bears these inscriptions:

"Captain John Boggs, Pioneer Settler of Boggs Run, 1774. Commandant Fort Henry 1782. Magistrate of Ohio County, 1785. Sheriff of Ohio County 1790-1792. Died at his home in Pickaway-co in 1826."

HURRICANES STOP TRANS-SEA PLANES

OLD ORCHARD, ME. June 7.—The crews of the monoplane Green Flash and Yellow Bird, preventing from starting their proposed trans-Atlantic flights for more than two weeks because of unfavorable weather again were held idle today. Everything had been in readiness for a double hop of this morning, but reported gusts of hurricane force 120 miles off shore accompanied by severe rain storms resulted in postponement of the start until tomorrow morning at the earliest.

Mrs. William Burns of Watset left Thursday for New York City from where she will sail for England to spend the summer visiting relatives. She will return to Circleville some time in September.

GIRL, 11, SEES FATHER SLAIN

Toledo Liquor Baron "Put On Spot" and Shot As Daughter Watches.

TOLEDO, O., June 7.—While his 11-year-old daughter looked on, Earl S. ("The") Bracker, 38, alleged Toledo liquor baron, was "put on the spot" and shot and killed in the driveway of his fashionable residence by two men, who police say, were rival gangsters.

Bracker, who, police say, has been engaged in the liquor traffic since the advent of prohibition, was said to be the "highest class" bootlegger in Toledo.

He returned from Detroit early this morning and after he had housed his car in the garage, he was accosted by the two men, who had stepped from a high-powered touring car parked in front of his home.

An argument ensued. Awakened by the men's voices, Rita Jane, Bracker's 11-year-old daughter, went to a window overlooking the driveway.

Between heart-rendering sobs, the little girl told how her father with his hands in the air, had pleaded for his life, and how immediately after the plea, a shot rang out, and her father fell with a bullet wound in his heart.

"An attempt was made three weeks ago to 'get' Bracker. A man jumped on the running-board of his auto and poked a gun in his face. Bracker shoved the man from the car."

FLEEING MEN EVADE POLICE EAST OF CITY

Search Marks Time As Police Watch For Traces of Desperate Trio.

Despite the use of an airplane and dogs, more than 100 men were unsuccessful Thursday and Friday night in apprehending the convicts who escaped from Junction City brick plant Tuesday, and who were discovered east of Circleville Thursday morning.

For the first time in the history of the Ohio penitentiary, the vicars of aviators were called on the hunt for escaped convicts when two pilots from the Columbus Flying Service squadron located the two missing men in fields along the Lancaster road.

A bloodhound from the City prison and a dog were used in the chase, although a Great Dane, by Louis McClure, drove two of the men into woods near M. J. Williams' about 10 o'clock Thursday.

The men being sought are Harry Scharr, 19, Circleville, two to seven years for stolen property; Raymond 31, Toledo, serving one to five for burglary and larceny; Clarence Ragland, 29, serving two to 13 years for stealing.

The search marked time as Pickaway-co deputy waited for word from the eastern portion of the state, who were notified to trace the men. "The men became lost in the Thursday afternoon and about in a clear-cut field, where they were seen to throw away their guns."

Lights were burning, guns were kept ready, and every farm house east of Circleville was alerted Thursday night in against the fugitives. Believed they will break through and make a desperate steal an auto or truck, according to Deputy C. Bloomer.

SEARCH INTENSIFIED
The search for the fugitives intensified at 2:30 p. m. when J. C. Woodard, sheriff at the Ohio penitentiary, Dan Bonzo, record clerk, from Columbus. A short later, Deputy William H. S. Er and Guards Elmer Johnson, Ernest Foulk came from Junction City brick plant with a bloodhound. Foulk is the man of the quartet who broke for freedom Thursday, and in which three were caught.

The bloodhound was taken from the point in the near home of Mrs. Williams where she discovered the fugitives eating bread, went through a 40-acre field on the T. P. Brown farm, the bloodhound had difficulty keeping the trail because of recent left by searchers who previously hunted in the field.

The trail finally ended a half mile east on Hargus creek and the dog was then taken to the Walter Brown farm where it had seen two sets of fresh tracks across his newly plowed field. Again the trail led into the woods of a small brook. The dog, followed by the penitentiary guards armed with deadly repeating rifles, which shoot explosive bullets, kept on into the thicket.

TIED FARM HAND
Suddenly the dog stopped and the guards pointed their rifles at a man lying in the grass. The man arose, saw the men, rifles and bloodhound, stood still and told the searchers he was Ralph McCoy, reeling in the shade of the thicket after working in the hot sun in a nearby field.

Warden Thomas sent an airplane from the Columbus Flying Service to aid in the search. The plane was Maynard Sawyer, and Russell A. Nell. They flew low over the fields which had been searched in an endeavor to locate the fugitives skulking in the high grain. If they saw the men they had been instructed to drop newspapers at the place of discovery to guide the searchers on the ground. Arrangements for the airplane search were made through The Circleville Herald by Warden Thomas.

After flying a number of miles over the fields, the airplane was seen by the fugitives, who fled.

FLEEING MEN EVADE POSSE EAST OF CITY

Search Marks Time As Farmers Watch For Trace of Desperate Trio.

Despite the use of an airplane and dogs, more than 100 men were unsuccessful Thursday and Thursday night in apprehending three convicts who escaped from the Junction City brick plant Tuesday and who were discovered east of Circleville Thursday morning.

For the first time in the history of the Ohio penitentiary, the services of aviators were enlisted in the hunt for escaped criminals when two pilots from the Columbus Flying Service endeavored to locate the trio hiding in wheat fields along the Lancaster pike.

A bloodhound from the Junction City prison and two local dogs were used in the chase without result, although a Great Dane owned by Louis McClarin, Circleville, drove two of the men out of the woods near M. J. Valentine's farm about 10 o'clock Thursday night.

WORD IS AWAITED
The men being sought are: Henry Schara, 19, Cleveland, serving two to seven years for receiving stolen property; Raymond Crooks, 31, Toledo, serving one to 15 years for burglary and larceny, and Clarence Ragland, 24, Toledo, serving two to 13 years for auto stealing.

The search marked time Friday as Pickaway-co deputy sheriffs waited for word from farmers in the eastern portion of the county who were notified to report any trace of the men. It is believed the men became lost in their flight Thursday afternoon and wandered about in a circle as they were returning to where they were first seen when routed by McClarin's dog.

Lights were burning and shotguns were kept lighted in about every farm home east of the city Thursday night in protection against the fugitives. It is believed they will break from hiding and make a desperate attempt to steal an auto or reach a railroad, according to Deputy Warden H. C. Blosser.

SEARCH INTENSIFIED
The search for the trio was intensified at 2:30 p. m. Thursday when J. C. Woodard, deputy warden at the Ohio penitentiary, and Dan Bonzo, record clerk, arrived from Columbus. A short time later, Deputy Warden H. C. Blosser and Guards Cleve Jennings and Ernest Foulk came from the Junction City brick plant with a bloodhound. Foulk is the guard who shot Stanley Starr, the fourth man of the quartet which made the break for freedom Tuesday and in which three were successful.

The bloodhound was started from the point in the rear of the home of Mrs. William Robinson where she discovered the three fugitives eating breakfast. It went through a 60-acre wheat field on the T. P. Brown farm and the bloodhound had difficulty keeping the trail because of the scent left by searchers who had previously hunted in the field.

The trail finally ended a half mile east on Hargus creek and the dog was then taken to the Walter Brown farm where Brown had seen two sets of fresh tracks across his newly plowed field. Again the trail led into the water of a small brook. The dog, followed by the penitentiary guards, armed with deadly repeating rifles, which shoot explosive bullets, kept on up to the thicket.

TIERED FARM HAND
Suddenly the dog stopped and the guards pointed their rifles at a man lying in the grass. The man arose, saw the menacing rifles and bloodhound, stood still and told the searchers he was Ralph McCoy, resting in the shade of the thicket after working in the hot sun in a nearby field.

Warden Thomas sent an airplane from the Columbus Flying Service to aid in the search. In the plane were Maynard Schryver and Russell A. Nell. They flew low over the fields which had been searched in an endeavor to locate the fugitives skulking in the high grain. If they saw the men, they had been instructed to drop newspapers at the place of discovery to guide the searchers on the ground. Arrangements for the airplane search were made through The Circleville Herald by Warden Thomas.

After flying a number of times over the fields, the aviators made (Turn to page two, please)

FAVORITE STAR HAS NEW ROLE

Corinne Griffith In "Saturday's Children" at Clifton Theater.

"Saturday's Children," Corinne Griffith's latest First National picture which is announced for the feature attraction at the Clifton theatre Friday and Saturday is said to a distinct contrast to "The Divine Lady" and "Outcast," and gives the star an excellent opportunity to further demonstrate her great versatility.

The colorful role of Emma Hart the daughter of a cook, who became the celebrated Lady, Hamilton in "The Divine Lady," deals with the life and loves of an historical character of the time of Marie Antoinette; the part of Miriam in "Outcast" is a character study of a girl of the San Francisco streets, who rises above her surroundings through an all compelling and regenerating love, while the role of Bobby Halvey in "Saturday's Children" is an intimate study of a twentieth century working girl of the native middle class, who has ultra-modern ideas on the subject of matrimony.

Bobby determines to convert her husband into a lover and her manner of bringing about this relationship forms an absorbing and most unusual story quite apart from the common run of pictures. This play by Maxwell Anderson, author of "Outside Looking In," "The White Desert" and co-author of "What Price Glory," was first introduced at the Booth theatre, New York, in 1927, and was immediately accepted by those quoted arbiters of the drama's fate, press and public, as a tremendous success. It won the Pulitzer prize as the best play of the season.

"THE ARIZONA CYCLONE"

Fred Humes is starred at the Grand theater tonight in "The Arizona Cyclone," a whirlwind tale of the west in which pluck and courage win out. The seventh chapter of "The Diamond Master" also will be shown.

Fresh Water Under Sea

An undersea well in the Persian gulf gives forth fresh water. That water is the only source of supply for the city of Bahrain. Divers equipped with waterproof bags descend into the depths, swiftly fill their water bags from the gushing spring and come back with sweet water for the inhabitants of the hottest spot on earth.

Earl of Balfour III

Much anxiety has been created in the British Kingdom by the grave condition of the Earl of Balfour, 80 years old, foremost British statesman, who lies seriously ill at the home of his brother and heir, Gerald Balfour, at London, Eng. Lord Balfour won his first seat in Parliament in 1874 and was created first earl of his name in 1922 after long and distinguished service with the British Government.

Many Leaning Towers

The famous leaning tower of Pisa is said to have sagged a further 12 inches out of plumb during the last century. It is now nearly fifteen feet out. This list is remarkable, considering that the tower is 150 feet high, while its foundations only go down ten feet. England's loftiest spire, that of Salisbury cathedral, diverges from the upright by 23 inches, and another leaning tower is that of the Temple of the Holy Cross at Bristol. At Pisa, there is a more modern leaning tower. It is that of S. Chrysostom's church, which can be seen from the High street and which was given a safe prop-ping-up some twenty years ago.

Immerse Sturgeons

According to a report of the American Museum of Natural History, the largest sturgeon on record was taken in the Columbia river in 1911, and weighed 1,000 pounds. There are species of sturgeon in Russian waters which are said to weigh more than a ton, but there are no records of catching them.

HUNTED WITH CROWNED HEADS

Editor, The Herald:
There is an interesting fellow on an unusual kind of farm up near Wellington. He is Tom Nash, supervisor of the State Game Preserve, and declared to be an international authority on game propagation. Mr. Nash has been in charge there for ten years, receiving his appointment not long after coming to the United States in 1915. Up until 1912 he was chief gamekeeper on the huge estates of Prince Szechenyi in Austria and Hungary.

WEATHER DATA KEPT BY NATURE FOR CENTURIES

Only Recently Has Man Learned
to Read Records Shown in the Calendar.

Washington.—Man has been keeping consistent weather records for only a few generations, but far back in the days when cavemen hunted reindeer in Europe weather records were nevertheless kept. They were kept on a natural calendar, which men have learned how to read only during the last few years.

This was one of the points developed at the meeting of the American Geographic union here recently, in a survey of weather-keeping devices and methods by C. F. Marvin and A. J. Henry of the United States weather bureau. The natural weather record of Stone age days consists of certain deposits of very fine-grained clays, called "varve clays." They were laid down by streams pouring from the melting glaciers into lakes and ponds, bearing loads of silt which they dropped when they flowed into still water.

When the streams were swollen, as in spring, they carried heavier particles, making a coarse layer; in late summer, when they were not so high, the particles they carried were finer, making a closer-grained layer on the bottom. Each year is represented by one of these composite layers, grading from coarse in the spring to fine grained in the fall.

Naturally, a year of heavy rains would build a thicker layer than a year of drought when the streams flowed thin and clear, so that it is possible by counting back on those sheets of varve clays to tell what the weather was like 10,001 or 10,003 years ago, almost as well as though it were only one or two years ago.

The varve clays have shown that the last of the glaciers in northern Europe melted about 6,500 B. C.

A second kind of nature weather record has been found in the annual rings of California big trees and other old trees.

Although these records are not nearly so old as those written in the clays, they carry the weather reports back beyond the beginning of the Christian era, telling of years of rain or years of drought and fire by the thickness of the annual layer of wood laid down in their trunks.

trina and Hungary. He was born in England and reared on the estate of the Duke of Marlborough, where he finally became master of the hunt and a recognized authority on propagation of wild life. He once took a hunt with the former Kaiser Wilhelm, while the latter was on a visit in England. On this hunt Nash met the Archduke of Austria whose assassination a few years later led to the World war.

ASSORTED PHEASANTS

Supervisor Nash is raising for the Fish and Game Division 12 breeds of pheasants on the Wellington Preserve, including ring-necked, black-necked, golden, silver, Reeves, Chinese and a number of hybrids. An interesting and beautiful species are pheasants of snow white plumage which took Nash nine years to develop. A fine display of these birds will be made at the State Fair this year, and a number of the county fairs. During 1928 the preserve produced 12,368 birds, besides thousands of eggs which were shipped to all parts of the country. Hen pheasants on the preserve lay about 40 eggs apiece each year. They do not incubate them. This task is turned over to the common domestic chicken. Nash is also supervisor of the Roosevelt Game Preserve near Portsmouth.

The meeting closed by singing "Blest Be the Tie," followed by the Lord's Prayer. The thank offering amounted to $6.10. The hostess assisted by Mrs. John H. Dunlap, served delicious refreshments of fruit salad, wafers and lemonade. The next meeting will be held at the home of Misses Ruth and Mary Jones, Saturday afternoon, July 6.

Luncheon Bills Show Coeds Are Gold Diggers

Columbia, Mo.—Coeds of the University of Missouri are "gold diggers." If the word of a student waiter in one of the popular eating places here can be accepted as authentic, "When girls come in alone to eat," he said, "their order seldom amounts to more than 15 or 20 cents, but when the same girls come with dates it's a different story. The bill then usually amounts up to from 70 cents to $1."

Few Get High Salaries

Washington.—If you are making more than $4,000 a year, you are doing better than approximately 40,000,000 other workers in the country, the National Home Study council, Washington, declares, pointing out that less than 4 per cent of the nation's 42,000,000 gainfully employed persons earn $4,000 annually.

CONVICTS ESCAPE

a wide survey of the surrounding countryside before returning to Columbus.

Automobile loads of searchers were then dispatched to patrol the roads in the eastern portion of the county and W. D. Leist reported that his daughter, Bernice, 11, had been frightened, while playing in a thicket, along the Devil's Backbone, by three men sneaking through the underbrush.

HUNT IS FRUITLESS

The bloodhound was taken there and started from the point where the girl had seen the men. The grass was trampled where the men had been seen and the bloodhound started with such a rush that it broke the heavy leather strap by which Deputy Warden Blosser was holding it. Again, however, the trail led to the water of a creek and a search of the wild and rocky region of the Devil's Backbone was fruitless after more than two hours spent there.

The deputy sheriffs and the penitentiary men returned to Circleville for supper, stopping at the home of Mrs. Robison where she identified the picture of Schara as being the man who was clad in working pants and white shirt. She said he was the man who watched her home from the Hargus creek bridge and who later made an unsuccessful attempt to stop the auto of Dr. E. L. Price, of Circleville.

DESCRIPTIONS TALLY

Deputy Warden Blosser said that Mrs. Robison's description of the men tallied closely with that of the fugitives. He said that when the three fled, they wore striped overalls over their prison uniforms and that the overalls had been found discarded near Junction City. He said that Ray Crooks had been working at the prison clay bank without a shirt when he made his dash for liberty. One of the men Mrs. Robison saw was naked above the waist. Blosser expressed the belief that the men had robbed some house to get the clothes worn by Schara and the money with which he had evidently purchased food from some small store.

Woodard and Bonzo returned early Thursday evening to Columbus and at 10 o'clock Blosser, his two guards and the bloodhound left for Junction City. Both groups of penitentiary officials asked to be called when the fugitives were seen again.

However, they were not called a half hour later when Louis McClarin, Circleville, came to the sheriff's office and reported that his two dogs, a great Dane and a German police dog, had chased two men from a woods into a 50-acre wheat field near the home of M. J. Valentine.

RUNS INTO FENCE

McClarin, who works in Lancaster, saw the three men on the primary bridge at 5:30 a. m. Thursday when he was driving to work. They tried to stop him, but he drove on because he had a large sum of money in his possession. When he returned home

Thursday night he learned that the three men he saw were escaped convicts.

With his brother, Harold McClarin and the two dogs, he decided to make his own search with the result that the dogs discovered two men hiding in a woods near the Valentine residence. The men fled into a wheat field, one of them running so fast and so blindly that he crashed into a wire fence with such force as to make him turn a flip-flop into the air. When he came down he kept on traveling.

The hard-run deputy sheriffs rushed to the Valentine farm and took up the chase with renewed interest. The great wheat field was searched thoroughly with hand flashlights and searchlights on autos parked along the road. But the men were not found and at 12:30 a. m. Friday the hunt was discontinued for the night.

HUNTED WITH CROWNED HEADS

There is an interesting fellow on an unusual kind of farm up near Weington. He is Tom Nash, supervisor of the State Game Preserve, and declared to be an international organizer on game preservation. Mr. Nash has been in charge there for ten years, receiving his appointment not long after coming to the United States in 1915. Up until 1912 he was chief gamekeeper on the huge estates of Prince Szechenyi in Austria and Hungary. He was born in England and reared on the estate of the Duke of Marlborough, where he finally became master of the hunt and a recognized authority on propagation of wild life. He once took a hunt with the former Kaiser Wilhelm, while the latter was on a visit in England. On this hunt Nash met the Archduke of Austria whose assassination a few years later led to the World war.

WEATHER DATA KEPT BY NATURE FOR CENTURIES

Only Recently Has Man Learned
to Read Records Shown in the Calendar.

Washington—Man has been keeping consistent weather records for only a few generations, but far back in the days when cavemen hunted reindeer in Europe weather records were nevertheless kept. They were kept on a natural calendar, which men have learned how to read only during the last few years.

This was one of the points developed at the meeting of the American Geographical Union here recently, in a survey of weather-keeping devices and methods by C. E. Maynard and A. J. Henry of the United States weather bureau. The natural weather record of Stone age days consists of certain deposits of very fine-grained clays, called "varve clays." They were laid down by streams pouring from the melting glaciers into lakes and ponds, bearing loads of silt which they dropped when they flowed into still water.

When the streams were swollen, as in spring, they carried heavier particles, making a coarse layer; in late summer, when they were not so high, the particles they carried were finer, making a closer-grained layer on the bottom. Each year is represented by one of these composite layers, grading from coarse in the spring to fine grained in the fall.

Naturally, a year of heavy rains would build a thicker layer than a year of drought when the streams flowed thin and clear, so that it is possible by counting back on those sheets of varve clays to tell what the weather was like 10,001 or 10,003 years ago, almost as well as though it were only one or two years ago. The varve clays have shown that the last of the glaciers in northern Europe melted about 6,500 B. C.

A second kind of natural weather record has been found in the annual rings of California big trees and other old trees.

Although these records are not nearly so old as those written in the clays, they carry the weather reports back beyond the beginning of the Christian era, telling of years of rain or years of drought and fire by the thickness of the annual layer of wood laid down in their trunks.

Grandma Holds Daily Tea Party for 60 Years

Lorain, Ohio—Mrs. Amelia C. Faragher, eighty-six, has the unique record of being hostess at a tea party at her home here every day for the past 60 years.

Morning visitors at "Grandma" Faragher's home will find her diligently tending her large tea kettle. She is always prepared to entertain guests—from three to twenty—who drop in for a brief conversation and to inquire regarding her health.

The custom was begun by Mrs. Faragher's husband, three score years ago in the same little farmhouse where "Grandma" now lives. He used to come in from the field in the middle of the morning and spend a half hour or so sipping the drink for which his widow has become famous.

After Faragher died, the daily tea party was continued by their children and grandchildren who grew up into the privilege of "tea at Gram's."

Bobby Baker, one of Mrs. Faragher's little grandchildren, has been punctual at the traditional social event for four years. He is six years old. For a while Bobby couldn't understand why his teacher refused to excuse him so he wouldn't be late at "Gram's" for tea.

Mrs. Faragher is an ideal hostess. An interesting conversationalist, she discourses on a variety of subjects and is careful not to bore her guests with inconsequential matters.

The weather may be inclement, storms may blow, rain or shine—it doesn't matter—because "Grandma" Faragher says she plans to continue her tea parties for at least ten more years.

Luncheon Bills Show Coeds Are Gold Diggers

Columbia, Mo.—Coeds of the University of Missouri are "gold diggers," if the word of a student waiter in one of the popular eating places here can be accepted as authentic. "When girls come in alone to eat," he said, "their order seldom amounts to more than 15 or 20 cents, but when the same girls come with dates it is a different story. The bill then usually amounts up to from 70 cents to $1."

Few Get High Salaries

Washington—If you are making more than $4,000 a year, you are doing better than approximately 400,000 other workers in the country, the National Home Study Council, Washington, declares, pointing out that less than 4 per cent of the nation's 42,000,000 gainfully employed persons earn $4,000 annually.

Mule Does Kicking

Kansas City, Mo.—Claiming to have had all of his internal organs "born loose and to have suffered profound nervous shock," Richard A. Pope, farmhand, has brought suit for $10,000 against owners of a Missouri mule that kicked him.

a wide survey of the surrounding countryside before returning to Columbus.

Automobile loads of searchers were then dispatched to patrol the roads in the eastern portion of the county and W. D. Leist reported that his daughter, Bernice, 11, had been frightened, while playing in a thicket along the Devil's Backbone, by three men sneaking through the underbrush.

HUNT IS FRUITLESS

The bloodhound was taken there and started from the point where the girl had seen the men. The grass was trampled where the men had been seen and the bloodhound started with such a rush that it broke the heavy leather strap by which Deputy Warden Blosser was holding it. Again, however, the trail led to the water of a creek and a search of the wild and rocky region of the Devil's Backbone was fruitless after more than two hours spent there.

The deputy sheriffs and the penitentiary men returned to Circleville for supper, stopping at the home of Mrs. Robison where she identified the picture of Schara as being the man who was clad in working pants and white shirt. She said he was the man who watched her home from the Hargus creek bridge and who later made an unsuccessful attempt to stop the auto of Dr. E. L. Price, of Circleville.

DESCRIPTIONS TALLY

Deputy Warden Blosser said that Mrs. Robison's description of the men tallied closely with that of the fugitives. He said that when the three fled, they wore striped overalls over their prison uniforms and that the overalls had been found discarded near Junction City. He said that Ray Crooks had been working at the prison clay bank without a shirt when he made his dash for liberty. One of the men Mrs. Robison saw was naked above the waist. Blosser expressed the belief that the men had robbed some house to get the clothes worn by Schara and the money with which he had evidently purchased food from some small store.

Woodard and Bonzo returned

early Thursday evening to Columbus and at 10 o'clock Blosser, his two guards and the bloodhound left for Junction City. Both groups of penitentiary officials asked to be called when the fugitives were seen again.

However, they were not called a half hour later when Louis McClarin, Circleville, came to the sheriff's office and reported that his two dogs, a great Dane and a German police dog, had chased two men from a woods into a 50-acre wheat field near the home of M. J. Valentine.

McClarin, who works in Lancaster, saw the three men on the main bridge at 5:30 a. m. Thursday when he was driving to work. They tried to stop him, but he drove on because he had a large sum of money in his possession. When he returned home Thursday night he learned that the three men he saw were escaped convicts.

With his brother, Harold McClarin and the two dogs, he decided to make his own search with the result that the dogs discovered two men hiding in a woods near the Valentine residence. The men fled into a wheat field, one of them running so fast and so blindly that he crashed into a wire fence with such force as to make him turn a flip-flop into the air. When he came down he kept on traveling.

The hard-run deputy sheriffs rushed to the Valentine farm and took up the chase with renewed interest. The great wheat field was searched thoroughly with hand flashlights and searchlights on autos parked along the road. But the men were not found and at 12:30 a. m. Friday the hunt session. When he returned home Thursday night he learned that the three men he saw were escaped convicts.

FAVORITE STAR HAS NEW ROLE

Corinne Griffith In "Saturday's Children" at Cliftona Theater.

"Saturday's Children," Corinne Griffith's latest First National picture which is announced for the feature attraction at the Cliftona theatre Friday and Saturday is said to a distinct contrast to "The Divine Lady" and "Outcast," and gives the star an excellent opportunity to further demonstrate her great versatility.

The colorful role of Emma Hart the daughter of a cook, who became the celebrated Lady, Hamilton in "The Divine Lady," deals with the life and loves of an historical character of the time of Marie Antoinette; the part of Miriam in "Outcast" is a character study of a girl of the San Francisco streets, who rises above her surroundings through an all compelling and regenerating love; while the role of Bobby Halvey in "Saturday's Children" is an intimate study of a twentieth century working girl of the native middle class, who has ultra-modern ideas on the subject of matrimony.

Bobby determines to convert her husband into a lover and her manner of bringing about this relationship forms an absorbing and most unusual story quite apart from the common run of pictures. This play by Maxwell Anderson, author of "Outside Looking In," "The White Desert" and co-author of "What Price Glory," was first introduced at the Booth theatre, New York, in 1927, and was immediately accepted by those quoted arbiters of the drama's fate, press and public, as a tremendous success. It won the Pulitzer prize as the best play of the season.

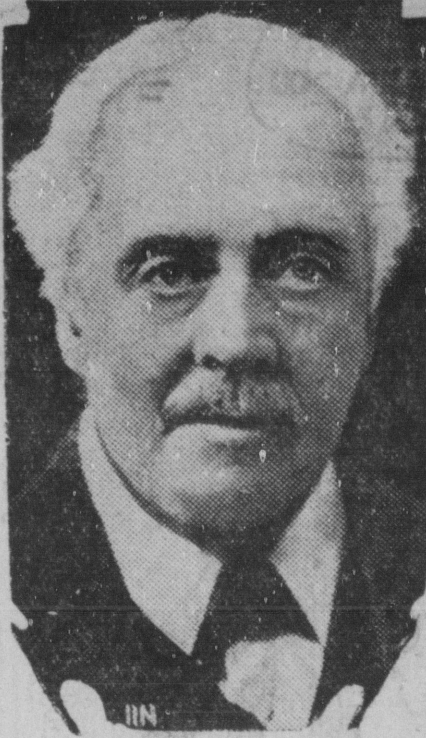

"THE ARIZONA CYCLONE"

Fred Humes is starred at the Grand theater tonight in "The Arizona Cyclone," a whirlwind tale of the west in which pluck and courage win out. The seventh chapter of "The Diamond Master" also will be shown.

Earl of Balfour III

Much anxiety has been created in the British Kingdom by the grave condition of the Earl of Balfour, 80 years old, foremost British statesman, who lies seriously ill at the home of his brother and heir, Gerald Balfour, at London, Eng. Lord Balfour won his first seat in Parliament in 1874 and was created first earl of his name in 1922 after long and distinguished service with the British Government.

Many Leaning Towers

The famous leaning tower of Pisa is said to have sagged a further 12 inches out of plumb during the last century. It is now nearly fifteen feet out. This list is remarkable, considering that the tower is 180 feet high, while its foundations only go down ten feet! England's loftiest spire, that of Salisbury cathedral, diverges from the upright by 23 inches, and another leaning tower is that of the Temple of the Holy Cross at Bristol. At Peckham, there is a more modern leaning tower. It is that of S. Chrysostom's church, which can be seen from the High street, and which was given a safe prop-ping-up some twenty years ago.

Immerse Sturgeons

According to a report of the American Museum of Natural History, the largest sturgeon on record was taken in the Columbia river in 1911, and weighed 1,000 pounds. There are species of sturgeon in Russian waters which are said to weigh more than a ton, but there are no records of catching them.

BIBLE THOUGHT

THE LIGHT OF THE WORLD

The people which sat in darkness saw great light; and to them which sat in the region of the shadow of death light is sprung up. From that time Jesus began to preach, and to say, Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand.—Matthew 4:16, 17.

PRAYER—Lord we rejoice in Thee, The Sun of Righteousness, help us to send out Thy light and Thy truth.

TARIFF AND OUR EXPORTS

A trenchant bit of comment on the tariff bill which recently passed the House of Representatives to be found in an article in the current Magazine of Wall Street. Reviewing the manner in which duties have been raised, the magazine remarks:

"Our foreign trade will be pined under handicaps at a time when we are in special need of expanded outlets for our over-producing factories. Our imports will be relatively if not actually reduced, and consequently it will become more difficult for the United States to play the role of a creditor nation, a role which it cannot escape."

"Economic evolution drives us to increased imports as well as exports, but our policies drives us in the opposite direction."

A nation that depends on its foreign trade as much as ours does might give that some earnest thought.

THE CHILD WITH BAD EYES

The importance of providing proper educational facilities for children with defective vision is stressed in a recent statement by Mrs. Winifred Hathaway, associate director of the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, who points out that many a child suffers great injustice in school simply because nobody realizes that he has weak eyes.

"Educators have found," she remarks, "that many children who had been accounted stupid, sullen, morose, mentally sub-normal and even criminal, displayed excellent intelligence and pleasing dispositions as soon as their defective vision was recognized and they were placed in sight-saving classes. The necessity for some children to take the same work over again, a serious educational waste, is frequently traced to eye difficulties."

Aside from the great host of children whose troubles can be ended by the provision of glasses, Mrs. Hathaway estimates that there are at least 60,000 school children in the nation who need to be educated in special sight-saving classes. At present, she says, there are not enough classes of that kind to accommodate a tenth of the number.

Here is a matter for educators to give serious consideration.

MERCHANT FLEET REVIVES

You can't keep a good man—or a good nation—down for long.

The world was practically wiped out the German merchant marine fleet, once one of the greatest in the world. After the armistice, merchant ships flying the German flag were scarce.

Now, however, the German merchant fleet is four-fifths as large as it was in its palmy pre-war days. It had in 1914 a tonnage of 5,200,000; now it has more than 4,000,000, and is growing fast.

Only the British and American merchant fleets surpass it in size; and a writer in the current World's Work predicts that Germany's fleet will pass America's in the next few years and press hard on the heels of Britain.

This fact is a high testimonial to German industry and efficiency.

RAISE AND BREAK A PAIR OF OXEN

Boys Find It Pleasant, Fascinating and Profitable.

(By H. L. GARRIGUES, Connecticut Agricultural College.)

Replying to the inquiry of a reader at Oxford, N. Y., I would say that it would be entirely possible to raise and break a pair of oxen, starting with bull calves. I would suggest that the earlier they are trained the easier it will be.

First, the calves should be trained to lead with a halter; then they can be tied together and driven as a pair. A small yoke can be made and fitted to them at an early age if desired, and if handled carefully they can be hitched to a small sled or cart and taught to do all of the things that a pair of oxen would be used for.

Many a boy throughout the eastern part of our country has trained one or more pairs of steers as he grew up on the farm, and found it a pleasant, fascinating and profitable pastime.

It is rather difficult to fit a harness to a steer or ox, although it has been done. I know of one owned by C. S. Miller of Waterbury, Conn., that has been kept several years and used as a single hitch. He has been used for mowing paths for the whole neighborhood, drawing fuel and manure, cultivating gardens and making himself generally useful. A horse collar can be used on a steer or ox and the necessary harness, including bridle, bit, and lines, can be fitted, but for all double work I should strongly recommend the yoke. In fact, a single-yoke is sometimes used.

The younger the calves are castrated the better, as a rule, although it is a common practice to castrate calves for steers at any time from two to six weeks of age. The principal objection to deforming the operation longer is a somewhat greater risk and the fact that the steers become somewhat stumpy in appearance, detracting from their trim, clean-cut lines, principally about the head and neck, and their attractive horns, often an important part in the beauty of a well-matched ox team.

Increasing Demand for Good Horses on Farms

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Since 1918 and 1919, when the number of horses on farms in the United States reached the highest total ever recorded, a sharp decline has been in evidence. Last year the number of horses on farms was no greater than in 1890, and the reduction does not yet show any signs of ceasing. Some significant facts may be attached to the fact that the farm price of horses has turned slightly up since 1923 and 1927. Horse prices in 1925, in comparison with the average prices of all commodities, were at the lowest point since 1898. It is therefore possible that the corner has been turned, and that the recent slight upward trend indicates an increasing demand. The average age of all horses on farms has steadily increased within the last few years. It is therefore practically certain, says the United States Department of Agriculture, that colts and young stock will shortly be in greater demand. The outlook is for an increase in the prices of all good horses.

LIVE STOCK HINTS

Frequent changes of pasture help to keep lambs healthy.

Corn alone is not a good ration for hogs. It lacks protein as well as minerals.

The remedy for diseased animals which promises to cure all ills usually ends by killing none of them.

If ewes are too thin as lambing time approaches, start a daily feeding of one-third pound of oats per head a month before lambing.

To develop a very large-sized hog it is essential that the hog be of the right conformation and breeding and then that he be fed a good ration.

The large part of the tuberculosis in accredited county hogs is found in the glands of the throat and intestines and generally comes from diseased poultry.

Carrying over a year's supply of roughage eliminates the possibility of interruption of feeding plans by a poor crop season.

Lowered vitality, from any cause, makes live stock subject to infections which animals of normal vigor might readily resist.

The problem of efficiently eradicating the "gad fly" is one of the most important and most difficult problems relating to the cattle industry which is now facing the government.

Feeding potatoes too exclusively makes a decidedly unbalanced and deficient ration. It also causes pigs to be pot-bellied, and further accounts for a poor grade of pork, whether fresh or cured.

If you can make as much money selling beef cattle when they are one year old, why wait until they are three and pay feed and board bills? Statistics show that the high market price per pound for one-year-olds offsets the greater weight of three-year-olds.

Fast Time

A horse has been known to travel approximately 21 or 22 miles an hour. A horse has made as high as one mile in 1 minute 35 1/2 seconds.

CHAPTER XXVI.

"AND just as I opened the door I heard Mr. Greely—"

"you know how he shouts—"

"You got into this, now you get out of it. Don't come to me, he said, 'I'm no pawnbroker. Go to the bank and do things right!'"

"And I don't know whether I ought to tell you this, or not—"

"Miss Yardley paused, and looked doubtfully at Daphne."

"Well . . . since you began, I think you ought to finish,"

Daphne murmured, torn between conscience and curiosity as to what went on behind that closed door."

"Miss Yardley took another look around the law library, to make sure no one was lurking behind a bookcase."

"Maybe, I shouldn't have told you anything . . . but on account of you and Mr. McKevitt being such friends . . ."

"It gave me such a shock. I never saw Mr. Greely so mad . . . believe me I left without waiting to say excuse me—"

"But what did Mr. Greely say, Miss Yardley?"

"Miss Yardley fidgeted on her common-sense heels, looked down at her nicely polished finger nails, and then back at the flushed and trembling Daphne."

"I couldn't repeat his exact words, but McKevitt's business must be in terrible shape. Evidently he has been buying on a margin—you know—taking a chance on stock going up, and counting on Greely to back him, and he's awfully mad, and he won't."

"And he said, when Mr. McKevitt said he knew what he was doing, that Sam Quentin was full of others that thought the same way—"

"Oh that doesn't mean anything!" Daphne almost laughed in her relief. "You know how Mr. Greely always talks—he exaggerates everything—"

"Just the same things must be pretty bad."

"Because Mr. Greely blew up! Cora Yardley, you know what a temper he has! Didn't I see him put that life-insurance salesman out last week just because he—"

"I don't know anything about life-insurance, but I do know that Mr. Greely's temper is under better control than some people think. He only lets it fly when he has a reason for it, and he thinks it's going to get him something—"

"All right then, he's trying to bully Ralph into doing things his way—but that's no sign he's right."

"and Ralph's wrong!" Daphne retorted.

"Have it your own way. I'm sorry I said anything. I'm sure it's nothing to me!" Miss Yardley got the last word after all.

After that there was a coolness between the two girls. Miss Yardley went out to lunch with Mr. McMurtrie's secretary instead of Daphne, and Daphne was left alone. Not that she cared . . . much . . . she had lots else to do.

There were two gorgeous, always to be remembered days, when Ralph met her at the Palace, and took her to lunch. Fun to wait for him in the Palm Court, with her little brown pumps tooting straight out before her. ("Never sit with your legs crossed, no lady does," her stepmother had taught her), and her gloved hands politely folded in her lap. Fun to watch the debutantes, and the luncheon groups, and the business men, well groomed, and prosperous looking. Waiting for Ralph . . . the best looking one of all!

Gardenias for her at the flower stand. "Or would you rather have roses, or one of those orchids? Too bad they haven't any prune blossoms!" Ralph teasing her, buying everything for her, thinking of her, the light-housekeeping ladies from upstairs had something to talk about again. There were rides into the country, and dinners down town, and two shows, and a swim in the big tank near the ocean when she almost drowned, paddling out beyond her depth, admiring his beautiful, rhythmic stroke, watching his wet blond head cleave through the dark green water.

And then there was the gala night, the red-letter night when he took her to hear Carmen at the Civic Auditorium, and she succumbed to Ralph's entreaties, and bought a black chiffon dinner dress for the occasion.

Miss Viola was a little hurt because she hadn't been asked to make it. "Of course, I couldn't make it for about half what it cost you. Those boughten things are just thrown together. Hold still, is that a flaw? No, it's only a basting. . . . Very stylish, but dearie, why did you get black? Black is so old—"

"With her black hair and white skin it's a crime for her to wear anything else," Flora shouted, drowning her out. "In fact if I were you, Daphne, I'd marry some old guy with one foot in the grave so as to be a young widow . . . if you wouldn't look wonderful in real swell mourning with one of those marvelous hats with white ruching, and a long veil, and a string of real pearls to relieve the all black—"

"I wore black for Hinkle two years, aber no pearl beads, I had jet," old Mrs. Hinkle mumbled, moistening a crooked finger and rubbing the hem of Daphne's dress to see if the dye was fast. "Ach it looks all right, I don't know, maybe it's stylish, aber, I wouldn't do for me—"

Even Mrs. Spellman, hearing the confab, came and stood in the doorway admiring the new dress and apologizing for her dirty kimono. "Don't look at me, I been washing out a few things, I like to do Mr. Spellman's union-suits myself, the laundry's so hard on them— That low neck looks fine on you, Miss Haines, you've got a real full neck, considering how thin you are. I always like a good, plump neck. And legs with some shape to them. Mr. Spellman always says . . . Mercy, don't all look at my legs, I got on an old pair of stockings, and Spellman's slippers, I was just going up stairs to get cleaned up, time goes so fast it's five o'clock before a body knows it—"

In the end she had to go up to Flora's room to get away from the mob. There Flora brushed her black hair until it lay slick and long, and sat on her small, well-shaped head. Lipstick, and a touch of mascara—Flora was an artist at make-up, and finally—after a half-hearted, "Oh I couldn't, Flora—I couldn't think of it," she borrowed Flora's Spanish shawl!

Coming out of the opera she saw her fleetest reflection in a glass. "Oh!" she gasped, stealing another look to make sure. This radiant, starry-eyed girl Daphne? Coming out of the opera with Ralph McKevitt!

"It's too good to be true," she thought that night. "It can't last—some darn thing'll go and happen!"

And something must have happened, for he stopped coming. "Busy," he explained briefly, "sorry I can't get away!" So there wasn't anything to do but bear it, and make up excuses to tell the inquisitive roomers.

Cuban Death Penalties

The Cuban embassy says that the execution in Cuba, when the death penalty is carried out, depends upon the condition of the man sentenced. If the condemned man is a member of the army, he is shot by a squad of soldiers. In case of a civilian being condemned to death, the execution is carried out by garrote. Garrote is a chair similar to the electric chair, which has a collar of iron and hide, which is fitted to the neck of the victim. This collar is attached to a large screw which, on moving, compresses and suffocates, causing death by strangulation or broken neck. Generally the victim is declared dead within ten or twelve minutes after the execution. It is a very old form of penalty, used in Spain since 1822.

Man Wears Flapper's Skirt

The Arabian nomad effects an attire which might lead to his being mistaken for a modern flapper. The lower part of his anatomy is covered with a garment which has every appearance of being a feminine skirt. It reaches about to his knees and is held in place by a sash of some gay color. A loose blouse and short sleeves completes the garb. His home is a portable one and he moves about with his family to suit his convenience.

The equipment of the home is very meager and in a few minutes he can take down his tent and move to another location. If he farms he makes use of a plow that might have done service in Biblical times, a very crude wooden implement drawn by two oxen.

Name Originated in War

Anzac is a name often applied to the people of Australia and New Zealand, says an article in Pathfinder.

The word originated during the World war. The Australian and New Zealand forces in the British service were officially known as the "Australian-New Zealand Army Corps." In popular usage this name was shortened to "Anzac," being the initial letters of the words composing the longer name.

Historical Law Codes

The earliest code, which is the name given to a collection of laws or constitutional articles, was that of Hammurabi, about 2100 B. C.

The codes of Theodosius and Justinian, Roman emperors, were the basis of the Code Napoleon of France. Theodosius appointed a commission of 16 in 435 A. D. to collect and codify the edicts and constitutions of the provinces of the Roman empire. This was published in 438. It was revised in 529 by the Emperor Justinian. The Code Napoleon, completed in 1804 consisted of 2,281 articles. There were partial codes in France previous to this. The Code Napoleon is the basis of the codes of the Two Sicilies, the Netherlands, the Swiss cantons, Bolivia and Louisiana. The Code Frederick is the codification of the Prussian laws, codified under Frederick the Great, and was the basis for the law of the German empire.

BIBLE THOUGHT

THE LIGHT OF THE WORLD

The people which sat in darkness saw great light; and to them which sat in the region of the shadow of death light is sprung up. From that time Jesus began to preach, and to say, Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand.—Matthew 4:16, 17.

TARIFF AND OUR EXPORTS

A trenchant bit of comment on the tariff bill which recently passed the House of Representatives is to be found in an article in the current Magazine of Wall Street.

Reviewing the manner in which duties have been raised, the magazine remarks: "Our foreign trade will be placed under handicaps at a time when we are in special need of expanded outlets for our over-producing factories. Our imports will be relatively if not actually reduced, and consequently it will become more difficult for the United States to play the role of a creditor nation, a role which it cannot escape."

"Economic evolution drives us to increased imports as well as exports, but our policies drives us in the opposite direction."

A nation that depends on its foreign trade as much as ours does might give that some earnest thought.

Quoting Judge (formerly) Johnson, who has been a judge of the Ohio Supreme Court for many years, and who has been a member of the Ohio Bar since 1882, he says: "The problem of probation and parole is one of the most important and most difficult problems relating to the administration of justice in this country."

Probation and parole are two methods of dealing with criminals which have been developed in recent years.

Probation is the suspension of the execution of a sentence for a specified period of time, on the condition that the offender comply with certain requirements.

Parole is the release of a prisoner from prison before the expiration of his term, on the condition that he comply with certain requirements.

Both probation and parole are designed to give the offender a chance to reform and to avoid the stigma of a prison record.

They are also designed to save the state the expense of maintaining a large prison population.

Probation and parole are now being used more and more extensively in this country.

They are becoming an important part of the criminal justice system.

They are helping to reduce the prison population and to give the offender a chance to reform.

They are also helping to save the state the expense of maintaining a large prison population.

Feeding hogs with exclusively corn is a bad habit. It also causes them to be fat and fat hogs are more susceptible to the hog cholera virus than lean hogs.

If two men take a horse mule riding and one of them falls, the other should not get up until the fallen man is up and on his feet.

A horse has been known to travel approximately 21 or 22 miles an hour. A horse has made as high as one mile in 1 minute 25 1/2 seconds.

IF THAT ISN'T JUST LIKE A WOMAN

CHAPTER XXVI.
AND just as I opened the door I heard Mr. Greely—
"You know how he shouts—say, 'You got into this now you can get out of it. Don't come to me,' he said, 'I'm no pawnbroker. Go to the bank and do things right! And I don't tell you whether I ought to tell you this, or not—' Miss Yardley paused, and looked doubtfully at Daphne. 'Well . . . since you began, I think you ought to finish,' Daphne murmured, torn between conscience and curiosity as to what went on behind that closed door. Miss Yardley took another look around the law library, to make sure no one was lurking behind a bookcase. 'Maybe, I shouldn't have told you anything . . . but on account of you and Mr. McKevitt being such friends. . . . It gave me such a shock. I never saw Mr. Greely so mad . . . believe me I left without waiting to say excuse me—'

"But what did Mr. Greely say, Miss Yardley?"

Miss Yardley fidgeted on her common-sense heels, looked down at her nicely polished finger nails, and then back at the flushed and trembling Daphne. "I couldn't repeat his exact words, but McKevitt's business must be in terrible shape. Evidently he has been buying on a margin—you know—taking a chance on stock going up, and counting on Greely to back him, and he's awfully mad, and he won't."

And he said, when Mr. McKevitt said he knew what he was doing, that San Quentin was full of others that thought the same way—
"Oh that doesn't mean anything!" Daphne almost laughed in her relief. "You know how Mr. Greely always talks—he exaggerates everything—"
"Just the same things must be pretty bad."

"Because Mr. Greely blew up! Cora Yardley, you know what a temper he has! Didn't I see him put that life-insurance salesman out last week just because he—"
"I don't know anything about life-insurance, but I do know that Mr. Greely's temper is under better control than some people think. He only lets it fly when he has a reason for it, and he thinks it's going to get him something—"

"All right then, he's trying to bully Ralph into doing things his way—but that's no sign he's right and Ralph's wrong!" Daphne retorted.

"Have it your own way. I'm sorry I said anything. I'm sure it's nothing to me!" Miss Yardley got the last word after all. After that there was a coolness between the two girls. Miss Yardley went out to lunch with Mr. McKevitt's secretary instead of Daphne, and Daphne was left alone. Not that she cared . . . much . . . she had lots else to do. There were two gorgeous, always to be remembered, days, when Ralph met her at the Palace, and took her to lunch. Fun to wait for him in the Palm Court, with her little brown pumps, looking straight out before her. "Never sit with your legs crossed, no lady does," her stepmother had taught her, and her gloved hands politely folded in her lap. Fun to watch the debutantes, and the luncheon groups, and the business men, well groomed and prosperous looking. Waiting for Ralph . . . the best looking one of all!

Gardenias for her at the flower stand. "Or would you rather have roses, or one of those orchids? Two each they haven't any prune blossoms!" Ralph teasing her, buying everything for her, thinking of everything. Surely he wouldn't be in such good spirits, and spending so much money if Miss Yardley were right!

The yellow car was often at the Hinkle door in the evenings now, and Mrs. Spellman and Mrs. Halliday, the light-housekeeping ladies from upstairs had something to talk about again. There were rides into the country, and dinners down town, and two shows, and a swim in the big tank near the ocean when she almost drowned, paddling out beyond the depth, admiring his beautiful, rhythmic stroke watching his wet blond head cleave through the dark green water.

And then there was the gala night, the red-letter night when he took her to hear Carmen at the Civic Auditorium and she succumbed to Ralph's entreaties, and bought a black chiffon dinner dress for the occasion.

Miss Viola was a little hurt because she hadn't been asked to make it. "Of course, I couldn't make it for about half what it cost you. Those boughten things are just thrown together. Hold still, that's a fine, very stylish, but dearie, why did you get black? Black is so old—"

"With her black hair and white skin it's a crime for her to wear black!"

Man Wears Flapper's Skirt
The Arabian puma effects an attire which might lead to his being mistaken for a modern flapper. The lower part of his anatomy is covered with a garment which has every appearance of being a feminine skirt. It reaches about to his knees and is held in place by a sash of some gay color. A loose blouse and short sleeves completes the garb. His home is a portable one and he moves about with his family to suit his convenience.

The equipment of the home is very meager and in a few minutes he can take down his tent and move to another location. If he farms he makes use of a plow that might have done service in Biblical times, a very crude wooden implement drawn by two oxen.

Name Originated in War
Anzaes is a name often applied to the people of Australia and New Zealand, says an article in Pathfinder Magazine. It originated during the World War. The Australian and New Zealand forces in the British service were officially known as the "Australian-New Zealand Army Corps." In popular usage this name was shortened to "Anzaes," being the initial letters of the words composing the longer name.

Honey Production
A good hive of bees in a good location can produce a pound of honey in three months of a year, or about 20 or 25 pounds a day.

Fame
We are told that the only thing woman has not yet vanquished is the revolving door.—Leslie Tran script.

Cuban Death Penalties
The Cuban embassy says that the execution in Cuba, when the death penalty is carried out, depends upon the condition of the man sentenced. If the condemned man is a member of the army, he is shot by a squad of soldiers. In case of a civilian being condemned to death, the execution is carried out by guillotine. Garrote is a chair similar to the electric chair, which has a collar of iron and hide, which is fitted to the neck of the victim. This collar is attached to a large screw which on moving compresses and suffocates, causing death by strangulation or broken neck. Generally the victim is declared dead within ten or twelve minutes after the execution. It is a very old form of penalty, used in Spain since 1832.

Historical Law Codes
The earliest code, which is the basis of a collection of laws or constitutional articles, was that of Hammurabi, about 2100 B. C. The codes of Theodorus and Justinian, Roman emperors, were the basis of the Code Napoleon of France. Theodosius appointed a commission of 16 in 435 A. D. to collect and codify the edicts and constitutions of the provinces of the Roman empire. This was published in 428. It was revised in 529 by the Emperor Justinian. The Code Napoleon, completed in 1804, consisted of 2,281 articles. There were penal codes in France previous to this. The Code Napoleon is the basis of the codes of the Swiss cantons, Bolivia and Louisiana. The Code Frederick is the codification of the Prussian laws, codified under Frederick the Great and was the basis for the law of the German empire.

Head Pine Industry
The "Big Four"—the shortleaf, the loblolly, the slash and the longleaf pine—comprise the mainstay of the South, says the American Tree Association. Each of these trees has certain specific requirements for its best growth.

I Thought that Bread as Good as This Could Only Be Homemade!

If you saw how exacting we are in selecting the ingredients in baking Wallace's Bread—how thorough we are in baking it—and how exceedingly careful we are to insure purity and perfection, you would know why Wallace's Bread is so good.

We first set out to bake Wallace's Bread—then we determined a fair price for its quality. We didn't make a price and then cut down the quality to meet it.

It isn't the price you pay, but it is the health you get and the taste you enjoy that makes Wallace's Bread the best bread to buy. Your grocer gets its fresh every day from the ovens.

There's a Difference in Bread.

HOYT'S COMPOUND MADE ME "NEW"

DECLARES 20 YEAR RESIDENT OF SPRINGFIELD, OHIO: SAYS HE IS A CHANGED PERSON.

MR. ORAN ADAMS

"I am a WELL MAN since taking the Hoyt's Compound and I want to endorse it to all who suffer," said Mr. Adams. "I am 45 years of age and have lived in Springfield, Ohio for the past 20 years. During the last seven years I have been a great sufferer of the stomach and kidney trouble which seemed to grow worse all the time even though I had spent hundreds of dollars trying different kinds of advertised medicines without any results whatever. My stomach always felt as though a large hard lump was inside of it and every time I ate anything it seemed as though the lump would become larger and more painful. Stomach gas would form and push upward against my heart and at times I was hardly able to get my breath. All of my friends and acquaintances know that I have suffered terribly from this affliction and also with bowel trouble as I was continually having pains across my back and shoulders. After trying all of these other medicines without relief I was skeptical about trying anything else but finally when I kept reading endorsements from local people for the Hoyt's Compound, I went and got it and started taking it myself. The first bottle gave me so much relief that I knew at last that I had found a cure and I am still taking it and getting better every day. Every organ in my body seems to be functioning perfectly and my entire system feels better all over. I am now able to work without becoming worn out and tired as before. I am now able to eat anything without having those dreadful pains and I can truthfully say that Hoyt's Compound has proved to be the greatest medicine of any I have ever taken. I am now a WELL MAN and want to endorse it to everyone who suffers."

Hoyt's Compound is now being explained every day here in this city at Wilder's Drug Store, and is also sold by leading druggists everywhere.

LIGHTER DIET IS BEST DURING HOT WEATHER

Take Precautions Against Overeating in Summer, Warns Dr. Copeland—Make Up in Delicacy What the Food Lacks in Gross Quantity

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

WITH the first really hot day every housekeeper thinks of change of food. Heavy foods and rich desserts seem to much for the season.

There are many delicious dishes which can be prepared with little effort. Salads, chicken and vegetables in aspic, and ice-box desserts add to the tempting qualities of the meal.

Salads made of fresh fruits and cheese, served with thin graham bread and butter sandwiches, form a well-balanced luncheon. Tea, coffee, milk or buttermilk will round out the meal.

There used to be a prejudice against canned foods. During the Spanish War, the "Embalmers' Beef Scandal" shocked the nation. But that was long ago. Such a thing could not happen now. Canned meats are not preserved with chemicals in these enlightened days. Preservatives are unnecessary, because sterilization and improved methods of canning have done away with the need of drugs and chemicals.

When you buy the products of some known establishment, you may be confident the food is just as pure as the label claims it to be. You know it is against the Federal Law to falsify a label and, if there were no higher motives than to escape the penalty of the inexorable law, the food would be as represented.

So, for your Summer meal you have the choice of many varieties of canned meat, fish and fowls. Then you have delicious cuts of dried beef and veal loaf.

Salads can be made without the slightest trouble. Canned fruits and vegetables are at your disposal. The green stuff for the salads grows everywhere. The salad dressings come in bottles, ready for instant use.

Sandwiches with some of the canned materials for fillings, are quickly made. Delicious cheeses are on sale everywhere. Bottled beverages above suspicion as to quality, are at your disposal.

You need not worry about the light meals of the hot days. The food manufacturers have made easy provision for you.

What about the healthfulness of these foods? You need give yourself no concern on this score. In many respects they are more wholesome than the uncovered and unprotected raw foods sometimes sold. In nutritional value they equal the home-cooked and prepared foods.

In hot weather you should not overfeed your family. Make up in delicacy and attractiveness what the food lacks in gross quantity. It will give you the appetite and be better for your health.

Extra care must be taken on hot days to avoid contaminated food. If you need as I have suggested to do, there is no danger, food prepared in this manner is always, but, in so in Summer.

LOCAL NIMRODS SHOOT TO TITLES

Pickaway-co shooters are hard to beat. Wednesday at the state shoot which is being held at Vandalia, Robert Immel won the state championship on double targets.

Thursday Marshall Spangler won the junior state championship having broken 97 out of 100 targets, and he and his father also won the state championship for father and son. There are still some of the Pickaway-co boys at the Vandalia shoot yet to be heard from and they may do some more wonders.

COCA COLAS LOSE TO UTILITIES NINE

In a game that was close and interesting the Ohio Utilities surprised the Coca Colas and gave them a 4 to 3 defeat in seven innings. Coca Colas were supposed to be the leading recreation nine but the Utilities showed them that they had a ball team also.

The winners, however, showed a stronger line-up than any previous game and can be counted one of the foremost contenders for league championship which starts next Monday evening at the Utilities grounds.

Grateful Man, 71, Freed From Double Ailment By New Medicine, Praises It Highly.

MR. JOHN DEAN.

"Although I am seventy-one years old, Konjola won a splendid victory in my stubborn case," said Mr. John Dean, 160 Clarendon avenue, Columbus. "My liver and kidneys were in a bad condition for some time. I was subject to dizzy spells, and spots appeared before my eyes. I had to arise three or four times a night due to bladder action. There were pains in my back, and my ankles swelled. I could hardly put my shoes on. Constipation was another source of worry."

"I began to improve with the first bottle of Konjola, and by the time I had finished the sixth bottle I was a well man. My kidneys and liver act normally. Dizzy spells and night rising vanished. The back pains are gone, and I feel immeasurably better. I highly endorse Konjola."

Konjola is sold in Circleville, Ohio, by Hamilton & Ryan's drug store and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.—Adv.

"Quebec" Indian Name

The word Quebec is of Indian origin. It was used by the Micmacs to denote a narrow passage like that between Halifax harbor and the Gulf of St. Lawrence. The peculiar conformation of the St. Lawrence river at Quebec where Cape Diamond narrows it so suddenly, is readily noticeable, and doubtless gave rise to the use of the word as the name of the city.

Common Breed of Hogs

The razor-back hog is a hog of no distinct breed, which is found in the South. Ordinarily, it is allowed to get most of its food by foraging. These hogs are usually not confined to lots or pens, as those of the recognized standard breeds found on hog farms. In different sections of the South they are known by other names, such as "pinkey wood roasters," "rakestraws" and "guinea hogs."

The early Romans measured their wealth in oxen and the Latin word "pecus" meaning cattle, is the root of the word "pecunia," the Latin for money.

His Future

Five-year-old Johnny's only uncle much admired and looked-up-to, is a confirmed bachelor, and Johnny thinks that whatever he does is just right. The other evening the little boy was invited to dinner at the neighbors', who have a little girl about his age. The father was in a mood for pleasanties, and began praising his little daughter's accomplishments in a smiling way. "Marjorie's learning to be a pretty good little cook," he asserted. "She'll make a fine wife for some boy some day." At that Johnny he announced, "I'm going to be a uncle!"

THE SMALL BALL IS LIKELY TO FIND A CREVICE

THE LARGE BALL IS EASIER TO HIT AS IT STANDS UP ON THE GRASS

A LARGE BALL HELPS THE AVERAGE PLAYER

NOW there is talk of changing the golf ball. Those who play the best golf find the present small ball a help to them. Long hitters would not want a larger or lighter ball, despite the fact that it stands up on the grass better and does not seek every little crevice in its path. The duffer, or Mr. Average Player, will find that the large ball will help his game at least 25 per cent. There is more surface to hit and the golfer thereby gains more confidence.

Distances of Stars

The celestial body nearest the earth is the moon, and astronomers measure the distance by observing simultaneously the angle to a given point on the moon from two widely separated points on the earth's surface. The triangle thus formed is then solved by the aid of trigonometry. The distance to the sun is measured in much the same way, by sighting the planet Venus as it passes across the face of the sun. The stars are measured by using the diameter of the orbit of the earth, about one hundred and eighty-six million miles, as the base of the triangle.

A LARGE BALL HELPS THE AVERAGE PLAYER

NOW there is talk of changing the golf ball. Those who play the best golf find the present small ball a help to them. Long hitters would not want a larger or lighter ball, despite the fact that it stands up on the grass better and does not seek every little crevice in its path.

The duffer, or Mr. Average Player, will find that the large ball will help his game at least 25 per cent. There is more surface to hit and the golfer thereby gains more confidence. (© 1929, Bell Syndicate)

Distances of Stars

The celestial body nearest the earth is the moon, and astronomers measure the distance by observing simultaneously the angle to a given point on the moon from two widely separated points on the earth's surface. The triangle thus formed is then solved by the aid of trigonometry. The distance to the sun is measured in much the same way, by sighting the planet Venus as it passes across the face of the sun. The stars are measured by using the diameter of the orbit of the earth, about one hundred and eighty-six million miles as the base of the triangle.

Perfect Diamond

The term "first quality" in a diamond signifies a stone absolutely white and free from all flaws and imperfections. The finest, old East Indian, the Jagersfontein, the Rivers and the Blue Wesselton diamonds are all approximately one grade.

Not Accepted Measure

The "load" is an indefinite measure, not generally recognized by state laws in this country. In Great Britain a load of earth or gravel is one cubic yard; a load of lumber is 50 cubic feet; a load of wheat is 40 bushels; a load of oats is 30 bushels, etc.

LIGHTER DIET IS BEST DURING HOT WEATHER

Take Precautions Against Overeating in Summer, Warns Dr. Copeland—Make Up in Delicacy What the Food Lacks in Gross Quantity

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

WITH the first really hot day every housekeeper thinks of change of food. Heavy foods and rich desserts seem to much for the season.

There are many delicious dishes which can be prepared with little effort. Salads, chicken and vegetables in aspic, and ice-box desserts add to the tempting qualities of the meal.

Salads made of fresh fruits and cheese, served with thin graham bread and butter sandwiches, form a well-balanced luncheon. Tea, coffee, milk or buttermilk will round out the meal.

There used to be a prejudice against canned foods. During the Spanish War, the "Embalsamed Beef Scandal" shocked the nation. But that was long, long ago. Such a thing could not happen now. Canned meats are not preserved with chemicals in these enlightened days. Preservatives are unnecessary, because sterilization and improved methods of canning have done away with the need of drugs and chemicals.

When you buy the products of some known establishment, you may be confident the food is just as pure as the label claims it to be. You know it is against the Federal Law to falsify a label and, if there were no higher motives than to escape the penalty of the inexorable law, the food would be as represented.

So, for your Summer meal you have the choice of many varieties of canned meat, fish and fowls. Then you have delicious cuts of dried beef and veal loaf.

Salads can be made without the slightest trouble. Canned fruits and vegetables are at your disposal. The green stuff for the salads grows everywhere. The salad dressings come in bottles, ready for instant use.

Sandwiches with some of the canned materials for fillings, are quickly made. Delicious cheeses are on sale everywhere. Bottled beverages, above suspicion as to quality, are at your disposal.

You need not worry about the light meals of the hot days. The food manufacturers have made easy provision for you.

What about the healthfulness of these foods?

You need give yourself no concern on this score. In many respects they are more wholesome than the uncovered and unprotected raw foods sometimes sold. In nutritional value they equal the home-cooked and prepared foods.

In hot weather you should not overfeed your family. Make up in delicacy and attractiveness what the food lacks in gross quantity. It will satisfy the appetite and be better for the health.

Extra care must be taken on hot days to avoid contaminated food. If you succeed as I have suggested to do, there is no danger. Food preservatives are important always, but so in Summer.

Historic Snuffbox
There is in existence a snuffbox made from a hoof of Napoleon's famous charger, Marengo. The hoof is silver-shod and fitted with a silver lid, upon which is this inscription: "Hoof of Marengo, barb charger of Napoleon, ridden by him at Marengo, Jena, Wagram, in the Russian campaign and at Waterloo."

Differ Over White Heather
Why white heather should be considered a luck-bringer is an open question. Certain Highland clans, whose chieftains included heather in their badge, have always regarded white specimens as lucky. On the other hand, ancient Gaelic traditions associated it with misfortune and death.

Blind Following
"Our ancestors claim our deference," said Hi Ho, the sage of Chinatown, "and so we proceed, while praising their virtues, to make their old mistakes."—Washington Star.

SATURDAY
"MAN IN THE ROUGH"

at the Lutheran parish house, with the Von Bora society in charge. The room was beautiful. The tables were arranged in a hollow square—the center with its soft green carpet of grass making a fit setting for the heavy baskets of luxurious flowers and the many floor lamps, lending their subdued lights to that of the candles. The class colors, blue and silver furnished the scheme of decoration. Bowls of ragged robins and bud vases of delphinium vied with blue candles in crystal candleholders in adding attractiveness.

Beside each plate whistles holding the class flower, American Beauty rose in a setting of blue and silver, the nut cups and place cards, all these—together with the guests in their multi-colored gowns made a colorful scene.

An elaborate and most delicious fried chicken dinner was served. This was preceded by a reading of the collect and interspersed with club songs. At the close of the dinner, Mrs. Stevenson presiding, presented Mrs. James Moffit, who sang in her unimpaired way "Little Boy Blue" and "As We Part." Miss Charlotte McEwing then gave the toast to the class. In her humorous view Miss McEwing accredits the club with having among its members some of the youth, much of the beauty and most of the brains of Circleville. She extends to the guests the club's willingness to help them live up to their motto, "Courage, Honesty, and Success" and as she had compared herself to a cloud and the club to a rainbow says that courage and honesty will as surely produce success as the cloud and sun produce the rainbow.

Miss Veronica Kuhns, in response, very prettily expressed the class' appreciation of this honor in their behalf closing with the toast.

"Here's to our hostesses, gracious and fine,
And here's to your club may her star ever shine
May we follow that star as the years quickly pass
Until some day in your midst will be girls of this class"

Mrs. Stevenson then introduced the speaker of the evening, Miss Mary Vosht Jones, junior member of the Law firm, Jones and Jones, of Zanesville, and a member of the State Executive Board. Miss Jones' address contained many fine ideas that should encourage, enlighten and direct these young people along their new paths. She made the theme of her talk the invisible things of life, illustrating with patriotism, love, friendship, as well as loyalty. She reminds the class that they must aim high that they are setting a pattern for society in general—that they shall work to lift the whole social strata by their efforts. To be loyal, charming, attractive, endeavoring to enrich themselves each day to know how to be a good friend and how to be sterling.

Miss Mildred Barthelmas followed with a whistling solo. Five of the class members then gave an emblem (tableau) not only for the benefit of the guests but for the benefit of the club as well. There's little doubt after seeing this so portrayed that any member will question the significance of any symbol in her emblem. After this tableau the evening was closed with the emblem song.

The following guests enjoyed this so ably managed occasion, Mrs. Erma Stevenson, Miss Vashti Jones, Miss Charlotte McEwing, Mrs. Esther Work, Miss Veronica Kuhns, Mrs. Helen Rowe, Miss Mildred Urton, Miss Minnie Palm, Dr. Carr, Miss Marvin Binkley, Mrs. Ruth Smith, Miss Dorothy Denman, Mrs. Blanche Valentine, Miss Hortense Reid, Miss Bess Warner, Miss Ida Walters, Miss Householder, Miss Clara Talbot, Mrs. Nancy Van Riper, Miss Mary Neff, Miss Martha Mary Wolfe, Miss Mary Connor, Miss Margaret Myers, Miss Ellen Lane, Miss Ruth Wolfe, Mrs. Alice Clark, Miss Mary Hoffman, Mrs. Barbara Jones, Miss Pauline Hill, Mrs. Gertrude Robinson, Miss Frances Jones, Miss Mary Howard, Miss Clara Southward, Miss Freda Dowden, Miss Mae Hudnell, Miss Minda Lyle, Mrs. Kellstadt, Miss Erma Rader, Mrs. Anna Chandler, Miss Marie Kellstadt, Miss Lotte Walters, Miss Virginia Given, Mrs. Given, Miss Esther Drum, Miss Mary Wilder, Miss Helen Crist, Mrs. Erma Gehres, Miss Alice Roof, Miss Dorothy Robinson, Miss Martha Herrington, Miss Jeannette Rowe, Mrs. Anna Forsterman, Miss Nelle Anderson, Miss Mary Heffner, Mrs. James Moffit, Miss Mildred Barthelmas, Mrs. Mary Morris and Mrs. Nora Fitzpatrick.

The following out-of-town guests, Mrs. Scheeter, Miss Ross and Miss Hanks of Wilmington, were also present.

CIRCLEVILLE GUESTS AT ASHVILLE PARTY
Among the thirty-two guests present Thursday night at tastefully appointed dinner-bridge at the home of Mrs. G. R. Gardner in Ashville, a number were from Circleville. The decorations at the affair were out of the ordinary with a single white American Beauty Rose, in a vase, adorning the center of each small table around which the guests were seated for an elaborate dinner preceding the bridge game.

Circleville was also at the top of the list, with the highest scores for the evening. Mrs. Harry Jackson and Mrs. Arthur Wiegand brought the two high prizes home.

The Circleville guests were Mrs. Orion King, Mrs. Hervey Sweyer, Mrs. R. R. Bales, Mrs. George Littleton, Mrs. Henry Mader, Mrs. Arthur Wiegand, Mrs. O. D. Mader, Mrs. I. F. Snyder, Mrs. Clarence Aler, Miss Minnie Gardner, Miss Flossie Gardner, Mrs. Harry Jackson, Mrs. G. L. Hitler, Mrs. G. D. Phillips, Mrs. A. L. Wilder, Mrs. Charles Mason, Miss Flo Bell, Mrs. Will Mack and Mrs. H. M. Crites.

SOCIETY MEETS
WITH MRS. GUSMAN

A very pleasant meeting of the Woman's Missionary Association of the United Brethren church was held Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Abbie Gusman on E. Franklin-st.

The hostess had charge of the program which opened with an inspiring song service. The topic of the worship period was Stewardship Toward God and Man. This consisted of Bible references read responsively, followed by prayer by Mrs. M. C. Kirkwood. A consecration solo, "Take My Life," was then softly sung by Mrs. Fannie Greeno. A dialogue, subject, "Stewardship," was given by the following ladies: Mrs. Cox, Mrs. Jennie Steele, Mrs. Frank Collier, Mrs. Fannie Greeno, Mrs. Kate Reichelderfer and Mrs. Bessie Long.

Mrs. B. C. Peters, delegate to the annual Woman's Missionary convention at Westerville in May then gave her report. This showed much thought and careful preparation, and was a very interesting and inspiring one as she painted a vivid word picture of the good things she had heard stressing loyalty to Jesus which was the keynote of the convention.

A short business session followed in charge of the president, Mrs. Orpha Kirkwood. Among things discussed was the picnic dinner in July at which time the Washington-ave. Missionary society of Columbus will be guests and put on the program.

The meeting closed with prayer. In the social hour that followed delicious home-made candy was served by the hostess.

Girl Graduates Are Honored At Annual Banquet

Once more the cycle of months has brought about that which is possibly the most outstanding social event in the Business and Professional Women's club—the banquet for the girl graduates. This year the affair was held at the Lutheran parish house, with the Von Bora society in charge. The room was beautiful. The tables were arranged in a hollow square—the center with its soft green carpet of grass making a fit setting for the heavy baskets of luxurious flowers and the many floor lamps, lending their subdued lights to that of the candles. The class colors, blue and silver furnished the scheme of decoration. Bowls of ragged robins and bud vases of delphinium vied with blue candles in crystal candleholders in adding attractiveness.

Beside each plate wristlets holding the class flower, American Beauty rose in a setting of blue and silver, the nut cups and place cards, all these—taken together with the guests in their multi-colored gowns made a colorful scene.

An elaborate and most delicious fried chicken dinner was served. This was preceded by a reading of the collect and interspersed with club songs. At the close of the dinner, Mrs. Stevenson presiding, presented Mrs. James Moffit, who sang in her unimitable way "Little Boy Blue" and "As We Part." Miss Charlotte McEwing then gave the toast to the class. In her humorous view Miss McEwing accredits the club with having among its members some of the youth, much of the beauty and most of the brains of Circleville. She extends to the guests the club's willingness to help them live up to their motto, "Courage, Honesty, and Success" and as she had compared herself to a cloud and the club to a rainbow says that courage and honesty will as surely produce success as the cloud and sun produce the rainbow.

Miss Veronica Kuhns, in response, very prettily expressed the class' appreciation of this honor in their behalf closing with the toast:

"Here's to our hostesses, gracious and fine, And here's to your club may her star ever shine

May we follow that star as the years quickly pass Until some day in your midst will be girls of this class."

Mrs. Stevenson then introduced the speaker of the evening, Miss Mary Voshti Jones, junior member of the Law firm, Jones and Jones, of Zanesville, and a member of the State Executive Board. Miss Jones' address contained many fine ideas that should encourage, enlighten and direct these young people along their new paths. She made the theme of her talk the invisible things of life, illustrating with patriotism, love, friendship, as well as loyalty. She reminds the class that they must aim high—that they are setting a pattern for society in general—that they shall work to lift the whole social strata by their efforts. To be loyal, charming, attractive, endeavoring to enrich themselves each day to know how to be a good friend and how to be sterling.

Miss Mildred Barthelmas followed with a whistling solo. Five of the class members then gave an emblem tableau not only for the benefit of the guests but for the benefit of the club as well. There's little doubt after seeing this so portrayed that any member will question the significance of any symbol in her emblem. After this tableau the evening was closed with the emblem song.

The following guests enjoyed this so ably managed occasion: Mrs. Erma Stevenson, Miss Vashli Jones, Miss Charlotte McEwing, Mrs. Esther Work, Miss Veronica Kuhns, Miss Helen Rowe, Miss Mildred Urton, Miss Minnie Palm, Dr. Carr, Miss Marvin Binkley, Mrs. Ruth Smith, Miss Dorothy Denman, Miss Blanche Valentine, Miss Hortense Reid, Miss Bess Warner, Miss Ida Walters, Miss Householder, Miss Clara Talbot, Mrs. Nancy Van Riper, Miss Mary Neff, Miss Martha Mary Wolfe, Miss Mary Connor, Miss Margaret Myers, Miss Ellen Lane, Miss Ruth Wolfe, Mrs. Allie Clark, Miss Mary Hoffman, Mrs. Barbara Jones, Miss Pauline Hill, Mrs. Gertrude Robison, Miss Frances Jones, Miss Mary Howard, Miss Clara Southward, Miss Freda Dowden, Miss Mae Hudnell, Miss Minnie Lyle, Mrs. Kellstadt, Miss Erma Rader, Mrs. Anna Chandler, Miss Marie Kellstadt, Miss Lottie Walters, Miss Virginia Given, Mrs. Given, Miss Esther Drum, Miss Mary Wilder, Miss Helen Crist, Mrs. Erma Gehres, Miss Alice Roof, Miss Dorothy Robinson, Miss Martha Herrstein, Miss Jeannette Rowe, Mrs. Anna Forceman, Miss Nelle Anderson, Miss Mary Heffner, Mrs. James Moffit, Miss Mildred Barthelmas, Mrs. Mary Morris and Mrs. Nora Fitzpatrick.

The following out-of-town guests Mrs. Sheeter, Miss Ross and Miss Hanks, of Wilmington, were also present.

CIRCLEVILLE GUESTS AT ASHVILLE PARTY
Among the thirty-two guests present Thursday night at tastefully appointed dinner-bridge at the home of Mrs. G. R. Gardner in Ashville, a number were from Circleville. The decorations at the affair were out of the ordinary with a single white American Beauty Rose, in a vase, adorning the center of each small table around which the guests were seated for an elaborate dinner preceding the bridge game. Circleville was also at the top of the list, with the highest scores for the evening. Mrs. Harry Jackson and Mrs. Arthur Wiegand brought the two high prizes home.

The Circleville guests were Mrs. Orion King, Mrs. Hervey Swoyer, Mrs. R. R. Bales, Mrs. George Littleton, Mrs. Henry Mader, Mrs. Arthur Wiegand, Mrs. O. D. Mader, Mrs. I. F. Snyder, Mrs. Clara Ester, Miss Minnie Gardner, Miss Flossie Gardner, Mrs. Harry Jackson, Mrs. G. L. Hitler, Mrs. G. D. Phillips, Mrs. A. L. Wilder, Mrs. Charles Mason, Miss Flo Bell, Mrs. Will Mack and Mrs. H. M. Crites.

SOCIETY MEETS WITH MRS. GUSMAN

A very pleasant meeting of the Womans Missionary Association of the United Brethren church was held Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Abbe Gusman on E. Franklin-st.

The hostess had charge of the program which opened with an inspiring song service. The topic of the worship period was Stewardship Toward God and Man. This consisted of Bible references read responsively, followed by prayer by Mrs. M. C. Kirkwood. A consecration solo, "Take My Life," was then softly sung by Mrs. Fannie Greeno. A dialogue, subject: "Stewardship," was given by the following ladies: Mrs. Cox, Mrs. Jennie Steele, Mrs. Frank Collier, Mrs. Fannie Greeno, Mrs. Kate Reichelderfer and Mrs. Bessie Long.

Mrs. B. C. Peters, delegate to the annual Woman's Missionary convention at Westerville in May then gave her report. This showed much thought and careful preparation, and was a very interesting and inspiring one as she painted a vivid word picture of the good things she had heard stressing loyalty to Jesus which was the keynote of the convention.

A short business session followed in charge of the president, Mrs. Orpha Kirkwood. Among things discussed was the picnic dinner in July at which time the Washington-ave Missionary society of Columbus will be guests and put on the program.

The meeting closed with prayer in the social hour that followed delicious home-made candy was served by the hostess.
